Deadline, the Christmas cat, loves post-Yuletide trip. That is the time around a Christmas tree when gifting is about finished, while paper, cards, tring, and tape litter the floor. And the cat goes daft.

Deadline prepped for this particular gift exchange. She quaffed an extra inch of milk the night before from the bowl and ate both dry and canned catfood. She slept at length in the morning until most of her humans were well in her charge.

There was so much action around and under the tree, there was no reason to get up into it or pull down a red ball.

Scotch tape is a nuisance, she intimated later in a more or less exclusive commentary. String and ribbon, hoo-boy, string and ribbon is the stuff. Round and through, spritz and spradle, pull and twist, yank and catch claw.

But scotchtape, the supposedly invisible kind, forget it. It sticks to paw, tail, and ear; it pulls every hair on a cat's stomach to get unstuck (pink as her nose); it's antifelineal, inordinate, cat-stopping, and unChristmasy.

"I'll bet it's manufactured by dogs," she said loud,so anybody could hear.

But the paper, the tissue paper, the wrapping paper, the cellophane, the plastic bits and pieces, ah! Quickest, neatest, crinkliest way to distract my humans ever. They can't find you just long enough to toss a bunch in the air and sally into a brown kraft wrapper which makes the big paper noise of the day.

Somebody say "daft"? Just because I ram a wall once in awhile getting out from under? Daft, never. Fun, humans, fun, the kind you only dream about. It doesn't cost a thing but a yanked tail once in a while and the chance of getting stepped on.

You buy all the stuff in the boxes and paper, right? And you just toss all this glitter and gumbaw on the floor, right? And I have the fun? Right?

I love post-Yuletide Christmas. Even better than pulling down the tree. Which comes Tuesday.

Nobody heard that.

Holiday Business Normal

Local businessmen are reporting the volume of Christmas business about the same as last year, in spite of inflation, talk of recession, and big troubles in the agricultural industry.

A survey of Cameron merchants this week, while last-minute shoppers filled the stores, showed that most of them saw not much increase in Christmas shopping but no big decrease from last year's totals.

A few businessmen reported sales sharply reduced from last year, especially in the appliance and bicycle trade.

Most optimistic was Dan Long, manager of J. C. Penneys. He said 1974 was a record year for sales and the company expects even better sales in 1975. Long said local buying was about the same as last year, with his store feeling shortages of some items. "Penneys is not thinking recession," Long said.

He added that the shopping season started a little later in Cameron this year due to the city's being tied up in the fortunes of the Yoe football team.

Long said he looked for government aid for cattlemen and some kind of government subsidy for farm income next year , which will help local businesses.

Bill McIntosh, owner of McIntosh's said he finds shopping volume about the same as last year as did Albert Hajovsky, owner of Western Auto, who also said they have been busy this Christmas season.

John Schigut, owner of Schigut's, found that volume was down slightly from last year. He said shoppers are shopping more wisely and putting more thought into what they buy. "There's more spirit behind their giving, I found," he said. He said he had expected volume to go down but couldn't really tell until after the last two shopping days this week.

Sales on Christmas lights and decorations are down this year, according to Porter Young of Ben Franklin's Variety Store. Young said folks are buying many smaller-priced items this year. If the store shows any loss, however, Young said it would be in decorations. He said sales were a little off. Maybe five percent behind last year.

The other variety store, Duke and Ayres, reported sales about normal. Manager Dale Hodge said the shopping season started later this year. Sales of toys are normal, he added, saying "Parents will take care of the children first."

Mrs. Bill Dase of Bernices' added they have been "pretty busy" this year and there seems to be no change from last year. Asked if husbands wait until the last minute to shop for their wives, she said that seems to be changing within the last couple of years.

Another manager, Frank Richter of Culpeppers, also said the shopping season started later this year since so many people were caught up in the football excitement. Richter said current conditions have also had an effect on sales but the store finds things about the same as in other years.

Sales Tax Refund Banked For City

The city of Cameron has banked a total of $82,168 from city sales tax refunds, which is a lot of pennies, in 1974. The latest check was received this month for sales in July, August, and September.

The refund was for $21,867.64, compared with $19,739.50 received by the city last December.

Last year's Christmas sales were reflected in the total of $21,174.84 received in March for sales in October, November, and December.

In June $19,232.97 was banked for sales in the months of January, February , and March. In September the total was $19,893.26 for sales in April, May, and June.

Bid Awaits Approval For UR Extension

Bids were opened Friday on construction in the urban renewal project extension, covering three blocks south of the present project. Three bids were received, with low bid coming from Bandas Industries of Temple.

A. W. McCullin, UR executive director, said the low bid exceeds the engineers estimate and will have to be approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development before the board can award the contract.

Bandas' bid was for $73,608.85. Other bids included Dowing Brothers of Waco, $101,291.24, and Young Brothers Inc. of Waco, $98,490.40.

New streets, curbs, gutters,walks, storm drainage, and sewer lines will be installed in the extension area. About eight feet of fill will be required in part of the project. The area will be leveled and after completion will be dedicated to the City of Cameron.

The area is designated as a youth exposition area--Junior Livestock Show, Farmers Market, and other public reuse.

McCullin said all properties in the area have been purchases with the exception of two. "We are hoping we can complete our property acquisition shortly so we can move along in our project," he said.

Demolition contract was awarded to R. O. Currey, Currey House Moving Company of Minerva, and work is now underway.

Livestock Show Fund Drive Starts

Cameron businesses will be contacted Monday, December 30 for their support to the County Junior Livestock Show,according to Steve Beattie, president of the show directors.

Workers interested in helping with this fund drive should meet at 9 a.m. Monday in the First National Bank Conference Room in Cameron. Money collected will go to the 4-H and FFA exhibitors in prize money and to a building fund.

Everyone is invited to attend the livestock show and hog sale at 1:30 p.m., Steve said,on January 11, 1975 in the Cameron Cotton Compress Company warehouse in Cameron.

TSTA To Hear About Legislative Program

A representative of the Texas State Teachers Association, Vance Rogers, regional consultant, is scheduled to speak to the Milam County Teachers Association on January 13.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Rockdale High School.

Rogers' subject will be "TSTA's Legislative Program-1975, Educational Rights for all Texas children."

Communities Enroll In Statewide Program

Five Milam County communities have entered the Texas Community Improvement Program for 1974-75. They include Davilla, Branchville, Gause, Griffin Chapel, and Maysfield.

To date a total of 179 communities representing 70 counties have submitted enrollemnt cards, with 145 of the communities competing for cash awards.

King Hussein Sees Possible Middle East War

AMMAN

Reuter--King Hussein of Jordan, disappointed by the outcome of the Rabat Arab summit conference, now believes that a new Middle East war is a strong likelihood by next spring or summer.

According to highly placed sources here, the king's mood after being over-ruled by his fellow Arab leaders in favor of Yasser Arafrt's Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) as representative of Palestinians, is one of regret at lost opportunities, coupled with pessimism about the future.

He is known to fear that unless there is a totally unexpected political breakthrough before the winter is over, the pressures will build up to a flashpoint where war could be started by Israel, by Syria, or by simple accident.

King Hussein is understood to be convinced that, despite the new arms acquired by Syria and other Arab states since October 1973, the Arabs still need considerable time before they can hope to stop Israel gaining the upper hand in a conventional military confrontation.

He is also convinced that Israel has the capability to produce nuclear weapons--and that is would be prepared to use them if its survival were at stake.

As far as Jordan is concerned, the same strategic military reasons that prevented this country from opening a third front in the October war--mainly unfavorable terrain and lack of adequate air cover--still apply.

Jordan's recent acquisition of U. S. F-5 Freedom fighter jets is not considered to have significantly changed the balance of power.

Against this bleak background, the king is still prepared to take part in attempts to further the Arab cause by peaceful means, even though he considers the chances much slimmer as a result of the Rabat conference.

He still believes that Jordan had a better chance than the PLO leaders--regarded as "terrorists" by Israel--to negotiate for the return of the occupied west bank of Jordan, and he has promised to give Palestinians there the right to self-determination once this is achieved.

Now that the Rabat summit conference has recognized the PLO as sole representative of the Palestinians and therefore responsible for the west bank, Jordan's direct involvement in future peace moves has been curtailed. Nevertheless, it still has the longest frontline with Israel of all the Arab countries.

Perhaps for this reason, Jordan is preparing to take part in a meeting, at foreign ministers' level, with Egypt, Syria, and the PLO. This is expected to be held in Cairo early next month.

The aim of the meeting is to follow up the decision of the Rabat conference. But the atmosphere between Jordan and the PLO is likely to be highly charged in the present climate of mutual distrust.

Senior government officials here say that despite the Rabat agreement the Palestinian commandos are still trying to destroy the Hashemite kingdom, as they have been ever since King Hussein expelled them from Jordan in the bloody fighting of 1970-71.

They claim that the PLO has one leadership and one overall policy--and that there is no real rift between the public moderation of Arafat and the recent threats of Abu Iyad, his chief lieutenant, to continue trying to kill King Hussein.

In this connection, sources here point to the assassination plot uncovered during the Rabat conference, for which Abu Iyad has publicly taken the credit.

Postmaster Caperton Retiring

Cameron Postmaster Narvie L. Caperton is retiring December 31 after some 34 years of federal service, according to an announcement from Sectional Center Manager Carl A. Hobbs of Austin.

NARVIE CAPERTON

Caperton has served as Postmaster in Cameron since 1965.

Sam Peebles, postmaster at Rockdale will be temporarily detailed to the position of Officer in Charge of the Cameron Post Office. Hobbs said Peebles will not be a candidate for the position of postmaster. "This makes it possible for qualified personnel in the Cameron office to compete for the position," Hobbs said. Peebles' detail is expected to be for less than 120 days.

During the last 35 years, Caperton has been active in business and civic activities in Cameron and Central Texas. He began his business career in 1937 as owner and operator of five variety stores in Central Texas.

He began his postal career as night dispatch clerk in 1941 in the Cameron Post Office. In 1945, he received an appointment as rural carrier, and served in that position until he was granted a leave of absence in 1963 to serve as administrative assistant to Cong. W. R. Poage in Washington, D. C. In 1965 he was appointed as postmaster.

Caperton is presently president of the Milam Broadcasting Co.; president of a local corporation which owns and operates the two nursing homes in Cameron; board member of Newton Memorial Hospital.

He was one of the founders of Cameron Industrial Foundation and under his leadership as president of this organization for five years (1965-1970), four new industris employing 500 employees were located in Cameron.

Caperton is past president of the Chamber of Commerce, Cameron Lions Club, Volunteer Fire Dept. He served a number of years as scoutmaster of a local Boy Scout troop and as area board member of the Girl Scouts. He was a member of the committee that wrote the city charter and also a memberof the committee that wrote the zoning ordinance for the city. He is active in the First Baptist Church and has served as Sunday School superintendent for the past 15 years. In 1963, he was presented the McCulli Civic Award as outstanding citizen.

Mr. and Mrs. Caperton have one daughter, Mrs. Alton Logan of Cameron, and three granddaughters.

County Growers Win In Regional Pecan Show

Three Milam County pecan producers exhibited winning entries in the 1974 Central Regional Pecan Show at Fort Worth recently. These entries had been winners in the Milam County show and were submitted to the regional show.

The entries will subsequently be judged in statewide competition next uear,according to Bill McCutchen, county agent.

Mrs. John W. Sapp of Cameron had two winners in the regional show. Her Variety Seedling that was named Champion In-Shell pecan at the local show won its division at the Regional show. Mrs. Sapp also placed second with a Texham entry.

Other Regional show winners included Terry Hardwick and Henry Schattle, both of Cameron. Terry's Choctaw entry placed third while Henry's Sioux entry placed second. Hardwick's Choctaw entry was the Reserve Champion In-Shell entry locally and Schattle's Sioux entry was the Champion shelling pecan at the County show.

Christmas Pot Plants Need Some Special Care

Dr. William Welch with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service offers a few tips on caring for these living Christmas gifts.

"Poinsettias, chrysantheumums, azaleas,and most other flowering pot plants will last much longer if kept in a cool location away from drafts," says the landscape horticulturist.

"Never place them where heating vents or other heat sources can blow or reflect directly on them."

"Water is extremely important. Since your flowering plant has probably been growning in a greenhouse where it has had all the water it could use, it will wilt quickly when deprived of sufficient moisture. So keep the soil fairly moist to the touch. This usually requires water about every other day," points out the Texas A&M University System spcialist.

Overwatering is also a possibility, but if the plants container drains well, this should not be a problem.

"Be sure the plant gets light," emphasizes Welch. "Artificial lighting is helpful, but most plants will remain attractive longer if placed near a window or other source of natural light. However, don't place the plant in direct sunshine or too near glass."

What about transplanting these flowering plants?

"Many species are not well adapted for garden use," says the specialist. Most florist type azaleas are difficult to grow and are best enjoyed for their flowering perid and discarded. Glozinias, cyclamen and poinsettias are not good landscape plants for most of Texas. Poinsettias need a long, warm growing season to flower outside and could be transplanted in South and parts of East Texas.

Chrysanthemums will perform satisfactorialy but the holiday season is not a good time to plant them outside. If they can be kept alive until early spring, cut them back to a height of three or four inches and plant them in well drained beds, advises the horticulturist.

"Flowering pot plants are great to recieve and give during the holiday season. And with a little extra care, they can give lasting pleasure," points out Welch.

Bikes Top Hazard List

Two-wheeled bikes top the national Consumer Product Safety Commission's hazardous product list, according to Mrs. Janice Carberry, family resource management speicalist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service,the Texas A&M University System.

She said that in an effort to reduce the one million yearly bicycle-related injuries, the Commission has adopted mandatory safety standards.

"Bike frames , wheels, steering and brake systems will have to meet new tests for effectiveness. New standards call for visible reflectors on fenders, wheels, and peddles. Also protective coverings or edges for fenders, protruding bolts, and chains will be necessary," Mrs. Carberry said.

These new standards will apply to all bicycles produced after Jan. 1, 1975--but bicycles manufactured earlier may continue to be sold, she noted.

"To distinguish which bicycles meet the requirements, the Commission has proposed the safer bickes bear the label 'meets U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission safety regulations for bicycles'," she said.

Grade Changes Imperil Trees

Care should be taken when raising or lowering the grade around large trees to minimize damage to large or small feeder roots.

When surrounding ground is excavated, retaining walls of treated 2x8-inch western wood will maintain the level surrounding the tree, and a flat cap can be added for a bench.

Raising the grade around trees will cut off some air and nutrients, damaging the roots. A tree well, decked over with 2x4s to match the new grade, will avoid covering the roots and shocking the tree's system.

CELEBRATION TIME

Why celebrate the end of one year and the beginning of the next? It seems a strange custom, yet there is a good reason for it.

Few, if any of us, have come even close to perfection in the year just ending. So we look ahead toward 365 brand-new days, blank pages in the next chapter of our lives.

What will we do with them? On the eve of a New Year, most of us certainly have the desire to try harder, to be better people.

But even while we are saying, "Off with the old and on with the new," we are also clinging to the good in the days gone by. As we renew old friendships, we thank God for those friends, for the Faith he has given us, for life itself.

And, in the midst of revelry, we start the year the best way of all: We go to church.

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

Cancer of the cervis is one of the easiest forms of cancer to cure -- if found early -- and the Texas State Department of Health is going allout to detect cancer in two big regions of the state.

Armed with a three-year, $732,787 grant, a screening program is being launched among the young and older low-income women for cancer of the uterine cervix in East Texas and far West Texas. The grant from Health, Education and Welfare's National Cancer Institute will provide for 24,000 screenings in the six-county Region 3, headquartered in El Paso, and the 35-county Region 7, with headquarters in Tyler.

The Texas grant is part of a $10 million study being undertaken by 12 health departments.

About 60,000 American women will develop cancer of the cervix, the narrow lower portion of the uterus, or womb. An estimated 7,800 women will die from the disease.

In Texas last year cancer kept its place as the number two cause of death behind heart disease. Total cancer deaths totalled 17,546, according to the State Health Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics. Cancer of the cervix accounted for 379 of those deaths.

Dr. Philip W. Mallory, deputy commissioner for Health Maintenance of the State Health Department said "The number of uterine cancer deaths doesn't indicate the amount of needless suffering brought on because the disease isn't detected early or is neglected."

"The important thing in this disease is to detect it early because it is curable. The cure rate with early detection is probably as high as 95 per cent," said Dr. Mallory.

A simple Pap test can detect cervical cancer while the disease is still localized. The test results may also indicate need for additional tests for more advanced forms of cervical cancer.

Women participating in the screening program will be advised if the Pap test results are suspicious or positive for cancer. They will be urged to return for retesting and definitive diagnosis. Biopsy (further study of bits of tissues from the suspicious area), dilation and curettage of the uterus, and other diagnostic procedures will be used.

Some people believe that to look down a well on May Day will reveal your future spouse's face.

County Agent's Notes

Book Seed In Advance

By Bill McCtuchen

I hate to repeat stories about shortages,because I feel that many of these have been trumped up to get higher prices.

Most seed dealers have been trying to protect themselves and their customers by asking them to book seed in advance because of an expected tight supply. Because of low yields and poor harvesting weather on the high plains some companies will not be able to deliver seed of the variety their customers may wish. Thi doesn't mean there won't be seed available, but it may not be the variety you want, or are familiar with.

What difference does a variety make? It may well be the difference between profit and loss in a grain sorghum crop.

Last year variety tests, in Milam County using all medium and medium late maturing varieties, showed a thousand pound per acre variance between top and bottom varieties. With production costs such as they are it doesn't make sense to use a variety that won't produce with the best of them.

To the best of my knowledge, there is no grain sorghum seed shortage, but I believe it would be wise to book or buy seed now. There will be seed to plant but it may not be of the variety you wish and you may have to settle for a low producer if you wait until planting time to purchase seed.

In general, variety demonstrations in Milam County have shown that producers should stay away fromshort season or late maturing varieties. There are enough medium or medium-late varieties from which to select.

Animal Conference Planned For April

The second annual Texas Animal Agriculture Conference is set for April 10-11, 1975 in the J. Earl Rudder Center at Texas A &M University.

Due to the popularity of the combined short courses in 1974, the format for 1975 will include beef cattle and forages, horse production, swine and dairy production, Maddox said. Some emphasis will be given to recreation, fish and wildlife potentials for land used in livestock enterprises, added the Texas Agricultural Extension Service beef cattle specialist.

Some of the most handsome Swiss chalets have stood for three centuries entirely without paint or stain.

Farmers Union Has Convention

Delegates to the 71st Anual Convention of the Texas Farmers Union meeting in Houston December 13 and 14 passed resolutions condemning weakening of the rice, cotton, peanut, and other commodity programs by the Administration.

Some 400 delegates attended the State's oldest farm organization's meeting and heard addresses by Congressman - elect Jack Hightower, Wichita Falls; Milt Holtan, general manager of the Farmers Unio Marketing and Processing Association and U. S. Congressman Jake Pickle, Austin.

Texas Farmers Union President Jay I. Naman, Waco, reported an increase in TFU memberships from 7,200 at the end of 1973 to 8,320 now.

Congressman Jake Pickle, speaking on Friday, predicted that Agriculture Secretary Butz will be replaced "before the first of the year," and said that he opposed Butz because Butz "supports large agri-business and corporate farming interests and is not oriented toward the family farmer."

Fish Farm Conference Planned

Catfish farmers and others interested in aquaculture will receive extensive information on the culture of both freshwater and saltwater fish at the upcoming Fish Farming Conference at Texas A&M University.

The conference, scheduled for January 9-10 at the Rudder Conference Center, also features the annual convention of the Catfish Farmers of Texas, according to James T. Davis, fisheries specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The conference will open at 10 a.m. on January 9 with discussions on the state and national situation for fish farming, including a look at future feed prices, projected fish harvests, and the effect of imports on fish farming.

Problems of water availability, both surface and subsurface, will also be discussed along with the impact of effluent regualtions on fish culture operations.

Conditions Ideal For Chaining Mesquite Brush

Heavy rains this fall have provided almost ideal conditions for getting rid of mesquite by chaining, says a brush control scientist.

C. E. Fisher, a 40-year veteran researcher who heads the Texas Agricultural Experiment Stations' brush control field team, says that heavy rains during the fall months have made it considerably easier to uproot mesquite trees and brush by the chaining method.

He explains that two or sometimes three powerful crawler tractors are used to pull a 400-foot chain weighing up to 36,000 pounds over the gound, destroying any dead brush or trees in its path.

"Chaining when the soil is wet helps to pull up larger trees. Smaller brush plants are at least knocked down to ground level," Fisher says.

Best results have been obtained in the late fall and winter, he adds, when mesquite is dormant and brittle so that it breaks up readily.

"We have found when the soil is dry, most of the trees are broken off at ground level and are able to sprout again the following year," the scientist reports.

Chains, much like anchor chains of large ships, are able to cut a swath through the mesquite, knocking down everything in their path.

Fisher notes that the chains most commonly used range from 300 to 400 and weigh 60 to 90 pounds per foot.

Costs of this method vary from $1.50 to $2.50 per acre, he reports, depending on the type of growth and terrain and whether the brush has been sprayed before.

"Chaining mesquite that has not been aerial sprayed is usually more costly and ineffective," Fisher says. "On unsprayed mesquite, more power is required to pull up large trees while small ones either bend or break off at ground level, easily sprouting back again. Sprayed mesquite pulls up much easier since most of the roots are dead and are not clinging to the soil."

According to Fisner, one of the most effective and economical methods of controlling mesquite on extensive areas of rangeland is to aerial spray with 2,4,5-T Tordon 225 or Banvel 2 plus 2, and then chain the treated area one to three years later. The spray kills a high percentage of the small brushy plants and the chain uproots most of the large trees.

"This combination of chemical and mechanical methods yields good control at low cost, opens up vast acreages of productive rangeland, and reduces the cost of gathering cattle by as much as 50 to 80 percent," he concludes.

Meat Import Figures Can Be Confusing

U. S. meat import figures are sometimes confusing because they are reported as three different sets of statistics, says Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He believes the figures for meat imports, which are collected and reported by the Department of Commerce, are highly accurate due to the many checks and balances that are used to gather the information, such as import duties, ship weights and meat inspection.

"Imports of meat into the U. S. are recorded on a product weight basis," explains Uvacek. "For example, when a box of boneless beef is imported, the net weight of the entire box is recorded.
domestically produced beef, however, is reported on a carcass weight basis. In other words, the weight of the whole carcass is recorded. For a comparison, the product weight of the imported meat must be converted to carcass weight. Automatically, therefore, we have two import series for the same meat."

Still a third series of import figures is also available, notes the Texas A&M University System specialist. It is the quantity of meat that is subject to the Meat Import Law. "This includes all fresh, chilled and frozen beef, veal, mutton and goat meat and all products rejected but not canned and preserved."

Uvacek notes that in 1973 there were 1.4 billion pounds of meat imported subject to the Meat Import Law, as compared with about 1.1 billion pounds for 1974 -- a 21 per cent decrease.

On a carcass weight basis, net beef and veal imports this year will represent only 7.6 per cent of the total U.S. production of beef and veal compared to 8.9 per cent in 1973.

Cattle On Feed at 1970 Low... Sheep and Lamb Feeding Also Declines... Wheat Pasture Prospects Good... Dairy Incomes Down.

TEXAS CONTINUES as the number one cattle feeding state in the nation, but feeders have the lowest number in feedlots in the state in the past four years. Cattle and calves on feed in Texas as of Dec. 1 totaled 1,428,000. This is 37 per cent below a year ago and eight per cent under last month. It is also the lowest since October, 1970.

During November, cattle feeders placed 51 per cent fewer cattle in their lots than a year ago. This is also 47 per cent below the previous month.

Nationwide, the same trend continues. In these seven states preparing monthly estimates of cattle on feed, the Dec. 1 inventory was three per cent below a year ago.

Cattle placed in the feedlots were down 33 per cent from a month earlier and are down almost 30 per cent from a year ago.

Reason for the continued decline in cattle feeding is due to continued high costs of production. Cattle marketings are also down considerably from month ago and year ago levels.

WHILE cattle feeding declines, there is also a downturn in the number of sheep and lambs on feed in Texas.

Drylot sheep feeders with a lot capacity of 2,000 head or more had 72,000 sheep and lambs on feed for slaughter as of Dec. 1. This is 16 per cent below the number on feed a month ago and 21 per cent below a year ago.

Current intentions to market include 31,000 in December, 32,000 in January and 9,000 in February.

Continued downturns in number of cattle and sheep on feed will in the long run be reflected to the consumer in fewer supplies of beef and lamb.

MEANWHILE, WHEAT PASTURE prospects in Texas continued to be bright. The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service notes that winter wheat pastures in the Panhandle and Low Plains of the state are providing excellent grazing for livestock. Early stands continue to make good growth generally, and stocking rates have surpassed last year's level as farmers continue to move livestock onto fields.

In the three-state region--Texas, Kansas, and Oklahoma--only about half of the fall seeded wheat had sufficient forage to support grazing. Forage supply is still rated as fair.

MILK PRODUCTION in Texas is up but it's also down. While milk production in the state during November was up two per cent from a year ago, it is down four per cent from the previous month.

Nationwide, the same trend is occurring. Milk production is down three percent from two years ago and is up only slightly from a year ago. Economists now are projecting that milk production in 1975 may be the lowest since 1947 or 1948.

The reasons for continued declines are due to increasing costs of production. A report recently noted that in Texas, dairymen are losing an average of 18 cents per hundredweight during the last quarter of this year. Dairy incomes fell seven per cent from the second quarter earnings. Production costs on the other hand are up 16 per cent.

Get Cotton Seed Tested For Low Fatty Acid

Cotton farmers who are planning on saving seed from their 1974 crop should be sure it is high in germination and low in free fatty acid.

"Most farmers check germination closely but may not be aware of the importance of the free fatty acid content," points out Dr. Robert Metzer, cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Free fatty acid is a by-product of seed deterioration so its content should not be more than 1 percent. Seed exposed to long periods of wet weather prior to harvesting or subjected to poor storage after harvesting will generally nave a higher acid content, indicating considerable seed deterioration," notes the Texas A&M University System specialist.

The acid content of cottonseed is especially important this year since much of the 1974 cotton crop suffered from wet weather this fall, explains Metzer.

He adds that cottonseed delinting plants commonly use the 1 percent level of free fatty acid as the breaking point in saving or rejecting seed for planting purposes.

"Seed with a high acid content often shows a high germination test, initially, but these seed will deteriorate rapidly in storage and germination will drop," explains the cotton specialist. "Of course, a low acid content does not insure top quality seed. Immature seed may be low in free fatty acid content."

Metzer advises producers against saving cottonseed for planting that has 2 percent or more free fatty acid. Seed delinting companies can assist producers in obtaining an acid test on their planting seed. Numerous laboratories in the state also are equipped to check the acid content of cottonseed.

"So, get your seed tested and then store it in a dry location," says Metzer. "The use of high quality planting seed is important in getting a crop up to a good stand and growing vigorously."

Wood Adds Beauty

Ways to add beauty to a home with wood windows, panel and louvered doors, and moldings are shown in an eight-page color booklet available for 25 cents in coin from Western Wood Products Assn., Dept. 517-P, Yeon Bldg., Portland, Or. 97204.

Western lumber output is down about 12 percent this year compared to 1973, estimates the Western Wood Products Association. A slight rebound is expected in 1975.

American Business Day Proposed

Americans have been celebrating Labor Day since the 1880s.

Why not an American Business Day?

Say May 13, 1975 as a starter.

Such a proposal passed the Senate May 2, 1974. The first celebrations could be as early as next May upon favorable action by the House.

The idea originated more than a year ago with Louis E. Farraye, then president of the Harrisonburg-Rockingham (Va.) Chamber of Commerce, which has been a prime mover behind the proposal ever since.

It could not be a legal holiday but a yearly observance on May 13--a date chosen because it was on May 13, 1607 that Jamestown was founded by colonists who came here under sponsorship of the Virginia Company of London, a private business venture.

In supporting the local Chamber's efforts, President Arch Booth of The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, recently urged Rep. Don Edwards (D-Calif)., chairman of a House Judiciary subcommittee, to act on the proposal yet this session. Booth wrote:

"Appropriately, the Nation has its Labor Day. Without workers, business could not operate. But without business there would be few jobs and only a comparative handful of workers. The success of the individual and collective segments of our economy depend upon business and labor working togehter. Busiess, too, deserves national recognition."

If you agree, write and let your Congressman hear you.

High Costs Have Impact On US Motor Racing

NEW YORK

Reuter - A year ago it was the energy crisis that curtailed motor racing schedules, and now the economic recession and high costs are having almost as great an impact on the sport in the United States.

The financial squeeze has caused some commercial sponsors to get out of racing altogether and others have cut back on the scale of their participation.

The demise of the Canadian-American challenge cup series for two-seated sports cars, a fixture on the racing calendar for the last nine years, served to point up the numerous problems the sport faces in 1975.

Termination of the Can-Am road-racing series, which at its peak offered total purse money of just over one million dollars for 10 races, was announced last month by the Sports Car Club of America. (SCCA).

Cameron Argetsinger, SCAA's executive-director, blamed the rising cost of manufacturing the big Can-Am cars as well as the lack of purse guarantees by race promoters.

The Can-Am series was reduced to five races last year after Edmonton, Alberta, and Riverside, California, were dropped from the original schedule and its cancellation came as no surprise to most racing people.

"The high cost of Can-Am participation brought about the need for a change," Argetsinger said.

Even though there has been a reduction in investment through introduction of the five-litre stock block and threee-litre racing engine specification for the 1975 Can-Am, constructors and entrants find today's economic climate against them. Many of them were unable to give race promoters and the SCCA frim commitments for 1975.

"On the other hand," he added, "constructors and entrants felt they needed guarantees of a minimum number of series events in order to amortise their investment."

It costs about $75,000 to build an average Can-Am car, but much more than that to develop a new model vehicle.

Argetsinger provided an optimistic note by saying the SCCA anticipated more entries and additional race of its other sports cars series, the Formula 5000 for single-seaters.

Several race circuits which annually held one Can-Am and one Formula 5000 event now might decide to add a second Formula 5000 race, he said.

The Can-Am series evolved as a sort of North American version of the international Grand Prix circuit. The big Can-Am machines were the fastest sports cars of all, easily topping 200 miles an hour on straights.

John Surtees won the inaugural series in 1966 in the Lola T-70. McLarens monopolised the next five years. with the late Bruce McLaren of New Zealand winning the driving championship in 1967 and 1969 and fellow countryman Denis Hulme winning in 1968 and 1970.

Newton Gains AA State Title

WICHITA FALLS

Newton, behind the running of halfback James Rollins and the passing of quarterback Matt Ward, scored touchdowns on its first seven possessions and rolled to a 56-26 victory over Spearman and a Class AA state title Saturday night.

Rollins, a senior who ined more than 2,000 yards rushing in his junior year but was injured for seven games this year, broke up the middle for 56-yard touchdown on the fourth play of the game to get Newton off and running.

Newton finished its first championship season with a 14-1 record while Spearman dropped to 13-2.

Newton scored 21 points in both the first and second quarters and seven in each of the final two. Spearman score came in the second quarter with 7, in the third quarter 6, and 13 in the final period.

Fill Out Deer Tag To Avoid A Citation

AUSTIN

Game wardens are reporting a rash of arrests of ordinarily law-abiding hunters who have been too careless of lazy to fill out their deer tags properly, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

"When our men find that a hunter has tagged a deer but has forgotten to fill it out and punch out the date, they really hate to issue a citation to the hunter, but they have to," according to Henry Burkett, head of law enforcement for the department. "Otherwise the law would have no meaning."

The problem according to officials, is that each tag must be filled in with the location of the kill, including the ranch and county, and the month and day must be punched out. Otherwise, the tag could be attached to the deer until final disposition and then reused over and over again.

Under the law the deer tag must remain with the carcass until final disposition. Then the tag must be destroyed.

If the hunter has bagged an anterless deer, he also is required to attach the anterless deer permit or special tag he receives from the landowner to the foreleg of the deer.

Then the deer can be transported directly to the hunter's home or to a commercial plant.

If the venison is to be shared, a legible note signed by the person who killed them deer must be attached to each portion given to other persons. The note must also list the address of the one who killed the deer, date of kill, hunting license number, and name or ranch and county where killed.

The deer's head must not be removed from the carcass until it has been processed, and delivered to its final destination, but the deer may be skinned. Final destination is defined as a person's home or a commercial processing facility where the deer is finally processed.

It is lawful for a hunter to process a deer in camp as long as he keeps the proper tag from his hunting license, the proper anterless permit or anterless tag with the processed meat, until such meat is delivered to a commercial locker plant or the residence of the person killing the deer.

Prupose of the regulations, according to the department officials, is to insure that all legally taken deer can be identified by game wardens and still permit a person to properly care for the meat.

610 Texans Drown This Year

Such was not the case with 248 people who lost their lives while swimming during the months of January through September 1974.

The grim statistics kept by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's Water Safety Section show that a total of 610 Texans have drowned thus far this year.

Ninety-one hapless fishermen died and another 45 persons lost their lives in boating mishaps.

'Don't Shade Your Eyes'...

We have been a little skeptical of the abundance of research which proliferated with all the federal grants of the 50s, 60s, particularly after hearing these lyrics sung by an entertainer of the period:

"Dont' shade your eyes, plagiarize; but be sure always to call it research."

Surveys of the projects of of those years have found science delving into exotic things even a fertile imagination finds difficult to top. You imagine it, and someone has tried to research it.

This kind of stuff is the obscure kind, not the basic or even technical stuff which proves expensive, but proves out. Who cares whether tstse fly has amber wings in summer and no wings at all in winter, if it lives that long. The people it bites won't survive that long, if they survive at all.

This kind of thing is ending, because the abundance of such an era is ending.

We know a great deal more about a lot of things; whole libraries and warehouses are filled with footnotes to science and history.

But the cry is no more for "research, research" than it is for "author, author" for such obscure stuff.

'Bow The Decks' Etc....

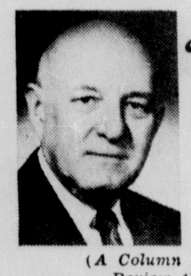
Betwixt holidays, events have a way of stuttering on their way, cluttering up highways with traffic and mortuaries with "people who knew better but did it anyway."

Speed may be the next thing taken out of Christmas and holidays if a proposal by Melvin Laird obtains, that is a 10-cent increase on gasoline or some similar measure such as rationing.

About 30 Texans will die these seven to 10 days of Christmas-New Year. A lot more will be hospitalized after surviving collision.

It does no good to advise or warn, it would seem, because the predictions always come close or exceed themselves.

'Tis the season to be 'folly' perhaps is appropriate, but it is worth another try to warn, quoting "Pogo" of years ago: "bow the decks with folls of lolly" and not with the front half of the family flivver or some "beige bomb."



"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

SLY CONGRESSMEN GET $10,000 EXPENSE BOOST

Rep. William S. Cohen (Me.). ". . . I am today introducing legislation to repeal the provisions of House Resolution 457 of the 92nd Congress--as enacted into law by Public Law 92-184--which provide the House Administration Committee with the authority to raise expense allowances of Members without approval by the full House. . .

"Public trust in our Government has been severly tested by the Watergate coverup, the energy crisis, and the present economic situation. Members of this body, myself included have repeatedly called for more open, accountable, and responsible Government. ..

"The American people today are looking to their elected officials for ture and open leadership. They have a right to be disappointed when they find it lacking in matters such as the recently publicized increases in Member's allowances for office equipment, stationery, and other expenses. Most of my colleagues are aware of the reports appearing in the news media during the fall recess that--

'Congress has raised the expense allowance od all its members during the past year by more than $10,000 . . . Under House rules. . . expense account increases are granted by the Administration Committee and do not involve a floor vote.'

"After listening hopefully to Congress promises of controlling the budget and cutting Federal spending, the public has discovered that the House has been increasing its own budget with no more debate or notification that a printed notice in the Congressional Record. . .

"I am, therefore, introducing a bill (H. R. 17546) to repeal the authority granted the House Administration Committee by the 92nd Congress to unilaterlly increase Members allowances and return the decisionmaking responsibility in this area to the full House membership where it belongs. . ."

CRUMP' GI SS ROOTS COMMENT

Some checking discluses some interesting information. We discover that H. R. 17546 has been referred to the Committee on House Administration for action. This is the same commttee that hands out the expense increases congressmen receive without having to comit themselves. It's obvious that H. R. 17546 will never get out of the committee.

Auto Insurance Rates Are Going Up Again

Auto insurance rates are going up again —an average of 8.8 per cent statewide, or from $8 to $39 for majority 1A and 1B adult drivers, depending on the rating territory they live in.

State Insurance Board announced the new rates effective January 16.

While the increase was judged necessary in view of rising auto repair and hospital rates and other costs, it was less than half the 18.3 per cent requested by the insurance industry. It was also far below the boost recommended originally—16.8 per cent—by the Board's own staff.

Overall cost to drivers is estimated at about $50 million a year. Gov. Dolph Briscoe said the industry's request would have boomed the cost another $60 million.

"Double digit inflation" destroyed potential savings which might have been achieved due to lower speed limits, reduced accidents and curtailed driving, said State Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie.

In a sample county (Travis), $100 deductible collision insurance will cost an average new car owner about $13 more, property damage liability another $5, bodily injury liability another $1 and full coverage comprehensive $5 more.

The Board also increased from $50 to $200 the amount of damages required for an insurance report on a traffic accident.

Governor Briscoe urged Texas motorists to take the National Safety Council defensive driving course (to obtain a 10 per cent automatic insurance discount for a three-year period) and "to "shop" for companies offering competitive rates (with savings of up to 15 per cent.)

BUDGET SOARING — An estimated $1.4 billion state surplus is fading fast.

Legislative Budget Board recommended a record $3.343 billion biennial state general revenue budget which reached deep into the fat cushion which inflation and the energy crunch provided.

However, LBB moved to set aside a remaining $500 million into a "permanent working capital account" to provide stability in cash flow and cover unexpected temporary deficits.

That leaves less than $100 million of the surplus for the legislature to play with in adjusting the 1976-77 biennial appropriations bill, and price tag of school finance formula revision (not covered in the LBB recommendations) could run to $1 billion. Lawmakers could, of course, throw out all the LBB proposals and start over.

APPOINTMENTS — An unusually-large number of major appointments were announced during the last week. Among them were the following:

Kenneth W. Cook as Alcoholic Beverage Commission administrator; Harry Ledbetter as deputy state comptroller; Randall "Buck" Wood as assistant comptroller for legal services; Charles Behrens as director of the comptroller's new funds management division; Charles M. Miles, assistant comptroller for staff services; Don W. Ray director of comptroller's field operations division;

Don B. Odom reappointed Insurance Commissioner; Joe D. Gunn reappointed to Texas Employment Commission; J. D. Chastain to succeed Joel Tisdale as chief of the Department of Public Safety Identification and Criminal Records Division; Hal M. Lattimore and Tom Cave to be district judges in Tarrant County; and John C. Mullen of Alice to be district attorney of the 79th judicial district.

Joe Christie said he has agreed to accept reappointment to a six-year term on the State Insurance Board.

PRISON REFORM BACKED —A legislative joint committee moved toward approval of recommendations for Texas prison reform but delayed a showdown vote.

The committee went on record for a new method of judging inmates eligible for parole, minimizing warden's evaluation.

It also approved more generous visiting rights with families, and called for study of possible conjugal visits.

Other recommendations would raise pay of Department of Corrections personnel, provide for improvement in medical services, support a major expansion in TDC work furlough, educational and vocational programs, endorse enlargement of the Board of Pardons and Paroles and favor a TDC legal aid setup to help inmates in their court cases.

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editor:

Among the countless shortages facing the country these days, we've been told, is a paper shortage, which is one of the more serious ones because without paper there'd be no newspapers, not to mention grocery bags, and the prospect of thousands of umemployed editors is enough to make the economy reel.

Naturally, recognizing that nothing would be more hazardous to the peace and tranquility of the nation than a bunch of hungry editors, I have given some thought to this problem. After all, even with well-fed editors, the country's not in too good a shape.

So, I began looking around for a way to conserve paper and 95 percent of all Americans send or receive Christmas greeting cards, and to achieve this it takes four billion cards a year.

Now four billion cards takes a tremendous amount of paper, yet who's to say people should stop sending Christmas cards? No, there's a better way. What we need is re-usable cards.

For example, I myself have received several cards and each one of them was signed or a name was printed on it. This makes it impossible for me to use the cards next year. Had the sender's name been written on a seperate small card, I'd have had my supply of next year's Christmas cards free of charge.

Congress ought to pass a law requiring all Christmas cards to have small slots cut into them suitable for inserting the sender's calling card. Talk about recycling and conserving paper! This way the same Christmas cards could be used over and over again for years. There wouldn't be one person in a hundred who could tell whether he was getting back this year the card he sent you last year, and even if he could he ought to keep quiet in the interest of keeping newspapers in business. Merry Christmas, an duck if you run into somebody in the greeting card business.

Your faithfully,
J. A.

"Compulsory" Surgery

Suffering from a hyperthyroid condition, Doris began to collect disability payments under the Social Security Act. But after a brief period, the government decided to pay no more.

"She isn't that sick," a government spokesman explained in a court hearing. "All she needs is a minor operation, which she refuses to have. That isn't our fault."

"I just don't like surgery," countered Doris. "They can't make such a thing compulsory."

However, the court agreed with the government that the payments could indeed be terminated. The court said Doris could not be classified as "disabled" when it was within her own power to get well.

The justification for the ruling was that the operation which Doris needed was relatively safe. Why, say the courts, should the government bear the consequences of a person's unusual squeamishness?

The greater the risk, however, the greater the right of the ailing person to refuse surgery without losing his benefits. He may also refuse surgery on the ground that it is not likely to help him. Thus:

A truck driver was disabled by a severe back problem. Here too the government wanted him to undergo corrective surgery rather than collect disability payments.

But this time, the operation was both painful and dangerous—and the chance of success was no more than 50%. Ruling against the government, the judge said:

"This court will not require claimant to submit to such odds."

One case involved a man who was unable to hold a job because he drank too much whiskey. In seeking social security payments, he claimed he could not change his habits. But a court turned him down, concluding that he could control his "disability" if he tried hard enough.

1040 U.S. Individual... Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on Federal tax matters is provided by the Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. Please explain the rules for postponing the tax on the sale of my residence.

A. The entire gain you realize on the sale or exchange of your personal residence is not taxed at the time of sale, if, within one year before or one year after the sale, you buy and occupy another residence the cost of which equals or exceeds the adjusted sales price of the old residence. Additional time is allowed if you construct the new residence.

The tax is postponed,not forgiven. Any gain not taxed in the year you sell your old residence is subtracted from the cost of the new residence, giving you a lower basis in the new residence to be used in the event of a later dispostion. If you sell the new residence in a later year and again replace it, you may continue to postpone any tax on the gain you realize. In addition, a special provision of the tax law allows you to exclude from your gross income all or part of the gain realized from the sale or exchange of your residence if you were 65 or older when the transaction took place.

For more information on selling your residence, pick up a copy of IRS Publication 523, "Tax Information on Selling Your Home." You can get a copy by mail. Direct your request to District Director, Internal Revenue Service, P.O. Box 2929, Austin, Texas 78767.

Q. How do I report the $50 I won and the $10 I lost in the football pool at my office?

A. Your total gambling winnings must be included in your income regardless of your losses. If you itemize your deduction on Schedule A, Form 1040, you may deduct your gambling losses incurred druing the past year to the extent they equal your winnings. You may not deduct gambling losses if you take the standard deduction, or use the tax tables to compute your tax. In the example, if you have no other winnings or losses, you should report the $50 as income and deduct the $10 if you itemize, rather than reporting only net winnings of $40.

Q. I recently received a check from a client in pament for services I had rendered. Since I'll be leaving the country soon on a business trip and may not return before the end of the year, I probably won't cash the check before next January. Do I have to pay tax on this income for this year or for 1975?

A. A valid check that you have received or that is available to you before the end of the year is income you gain in that year even if you do not cash the check or deposit it to your account until the next year.

Q. As a member of the National Guard, I receive a small clothing allowance for purchasing my uniforms. I must pay the balance of the cost of uniforms not covered by the allowance. Can I deduct this balance?

A. Yes, you may deduct the unreimbursed cost of your uniform if military regulations restrict you from wearing it except while performing duties in the Guard.
